NEWSBOY'S BITTER NEED

To Obtain Food for His Mother, his Brothers and Sisters, he Hawked the Story of his Father's Suicide

St. Louis, Jan. 25.—Almost overcome by grief because his father committed suicide, little Julius Kastner, a 12-year-old newsboy, mustered enough courage to visit his usual street corner yesterday afternoon and cry the deed as the special feature of the afternoon papers.

Suicided to Save His Loved Ones
From Starvation

The father left a note addressed to his wife and children, saying that his inability to procure work had left his family penniless, and concluded that the deed was committed so that his body might be sold to a medical college for cash enough to pay the rent and save the loved ones from starvation.

ALASKA-YUKON EXPOSITION ON THE BLACK LIST

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 25.—Members of labor unions everywhere are warned by the labor bodies of Seattle and Washington, to stay away from the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, and have placed that gigantic project on the "unfair" or "we don't patronize" list. This action has been taken as a result of the employment of non-union labor in the construction work now in progress on the exposition site. The directors of the exposition company have refused to alter their policy in regard to the open shop, and as a result the labor union boycott will likely continue and organized labor will have no representation at the exposition.

CAPTURE OF A CROOK

T. Nordstrom, of Astoria, Ore., who Bought a Yacht and was Preparing To Sail Around the World

(Jacksonville Metropolis, 24th.)

Tracked through many states and sailing under many different names T.
Nordstrom, a former bank clerk of Astoria, Ore., was captured at Mayport last night. He is wanted at Chicago, where, posing as the representative of F. A. Cole & Sons, wealthy wholesale grocers, of his home city, he forged the name of J. Ray Bennett, cashier of the Astoria Bank, and cashed a draft for $15,000 at the First National Bank.

From Chicago Nordstrom fled and continued his crooked dealings in many cities throughout the United States.
During all of his operations since the Chicago forgery, he has been closely followed by J. H. Walker, a Pinkerton detective from the Cincinnati office of this great firm.

It was Walker who located the man near this city and planned his capture, when his private yacht Kathryn, was boarded as she lay in mid-stream off Mayport by a party of officers. Nord-strom was taken from his bunk and brought to this city.

The story of Nordstrom's career since the forgery at Chicago reads like a chapter from a dime novel.

From Chicago, where he was C. A.
Cole, Nordstrom appeared in various cities under other names. At San Francisco, where he was tracked, he operated under the name of B. F. Kavanaugh. Under this name also he carried on crooked deals at Galveston, Tex., and at New Orleans. From New Orleans he was followed to Brunswick, Ga., where he had dealings with the Brunswick Bank and Trust Company, as F. M. Wood.

The forgery of the draft on the Chicago bank was committed on December 3 last. From that time until December 30, Nordstrom was followed over miles of territory and finally traced to Brunswick. Here he lived in luxury for a time and purchased from F.
D. Aiken, president of the Brunswick Bank and Trust Company, the yacht aboard which he was beginning a world tour when captured.

From Brunswick Nordstrom came to Jacksonville and aboard the boat whose name was changed from Lucille to Kathryn.

Coming to Jacksonville, the Pinkerton man picked up the clue, and thinking Nordstrom had gone to St.
Augustine in his trim little yacht, Detective Walker went to that city yesterday. He learned that the boat, with its notorious owner, had stopped at Mayport.

Walker again reached this city last evening and conferred at once with Sheriff Bowden. His story was quickly told, and the ever-ready guardian of the law in Duval county, notwithstanding the fact that the night was a fearful one, at once began preparations to join in the trip to the bar in an effort to land the forger.

The wind was blowing a gale, a cold northwester, and the river was rough and choppy when the excursion boat Margaret, chartered by the officers, set out on her trip to the mouth of the river. Aboard were Sheriff Bowden, Pinkerton Detective Walker and his assistant.

The trip to Newport was a rough one, but the natty little Margaret carried the five officials safely to their destination.

It was 11:30 o'clock when Detective Walker's assistant, McCullough, who had located the Kathryn and her owner, pointed out the craft to the other officers, and an order was given to put out all lights. Gliding alongside the Kathryn as noiselessly as possible, the engines of the Margaret ceased puffing, and Sheriff Bowden, Deputy Jones and Detectives Walker, Crawford and McCullough boarded.

Fearlessly entering the sleeping parlaments of the boat, guided only by a flash from an electric pocket lantern, Sheriff Bowden pounced upon the sleeping Nordstrom. Holding a revolver at Nordstrom's chest as he reached for a Winchester rifle above his head the sheriff calmly spoke the words, "You're my man. Come out.
We want you."

With the aid of Deputy Jones and Detective Crawford, Nordstrom was half pulled from his bunk and hurried aboard the Margaret in his night clothes. The Kathryn was tied to the stern of the Margaret, and with the other members of Nordstrom's party aboard was towed to the city.

On the return trip Nordstrom was positively identified as the man want-that to deny his identity would gain him nothing, Nordstrom admitted his guilt, and said he would submit peacefully.
